Description: When Milwaukee Went to War brings to life the incredible stories behind the many men and women, from all walks of life, who stepped up and proudly worked toward achieving victory during World War II. The talk will chronicle their hard work and sacrifices, along with the investment and innovation by Milwaukee industry, that led to success.

'Every combat division, every naval task force, every squadron of fighting planes is dependent for its equipment and ammunition and fuel and food . . . on the American people in civilian clothes in the offices and in the factories and on the farms at home.'

Franklin D. Roosevelt, 1943

Bio of Presenter: Tom Fehring is an engineer by training and practice, having worked at 'keeping the lights on' at Wisconsin Energy Corporation and its various subsidiaries. Earlier in his career, he also worked for a time at Falk Corporation, Briggs & Stratton and Ford Motor Company. He was born and grew up in Milwaukee in the shadows of the A.O. Smith factory. Tom attended Marquette University and attained bachelor and master's degrees in Mechanical Engineering. Tom's foray into industrial history began 40 years ago and escalated following his retirement when he was appointed to the history and heritage committee of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. He has also been involved with community history, serving on the Whitefish Bay Historic Preservation Commission and writing four books on the Village's history.

Menstrual Product Drive

Now Through - May 18

Are You There God? It's Me, Margaret, was a popular novel with young readers in the 1970s. It's known for its relatable portrayal of a young girl confronting early adolescent anxieties.

In celebration of the release of the movie version of the book, Marcus Theatres, Milwaukee Public Libraries (including Whitefish Bay), and United Way are holding a menstrual product drive.

Twenty-three percent of U.S. students struggle to afford menstrual hygiene products – we know these products can be costly to families and students.

You can help today by participating in our drive. Drop off new in original packaging pads, tampons, and panty liners in the donation bin located in our front lobby starting April 10.

Are You There God? It's Me, Margaret is opening exclusively in theatres on April 28th.
